

Before the Parade Passes By

Characters :

Johnny Xavier – early 50’s, pregnant at 15, married young, and an ageless beauty of happiness and love, prides herself very much on her three gay children and her decorations, enjoys being the friendly and ever-smiling hostess.

Zeke Xavier – early 50’s still with his handsome boyish looks, a counselor for the gay community and Johnny’s husband, he’s very “scrooge”-like every pride day because of his gay sperm.

Pepper – early 30’s, the oldest child; proud as a gay peacock, loves being handsome and being admired by everybody even himself.

Lily – late 20’s, the middle child, a cute lesbian with no direction in life except to only be a revolving doormat for her ex- girlfriends. She’s on a mission to protest pride day because her new girlfriend said so.

Blaine – early 20’s, the youngest child; charming, polite, neatly dressed, very wishy-washy when it comes to confrontations, his mother outed him at the age of six during Kindergarten graduation

Uncle Berry – an exuberant early 40’s, Zeke’s younger oddball brother who’s only duty in life is to dress up as the condom fairy and cover the world with rubber protection.

Miller – late 20’s, Pepper’s devoted and beloved boyfriend of several years. He’s an orphan who’s always dreamed of a family and is about to get his wish.

Elvis – 15, an awkward looking boy who’s full of awe, wonder and questions. He took a two day ride on a bus from his hometown to meet the Xaviers and his dad.

Yvonne – early 20’s, Johnny’s blubbering, peculiar and nervous co-worker who has a special interest in pride day

Vera – the old lady from the retirement home who’s been dragged to pride day by a drag queen named Miss Pissy. Her bark is ten times worse as her bite.

Miss Pissy Pants – undetermined age, the not so very pretty drag queen, his attempt at true drag divaness isn’t really up to par but he’ll never give up at being a legend.
